"Goddess of Happiness" Not
Cause of Divorce, Pierre
Tartoue Declares, Suing
"Illustrated Daily News"

Pierre Tartoue, the portrait painter, and his wife, Mrs. Claudia Windsor Tartoue, formerly a California society girl and heiress, each filed a $100,000 libel suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against the News Syndicate Company, publisher of "The Illustrated Daily News." The suit is based on the production by the defendant of a picture by the artist entitled "The Goddess of Happiness," showing a partly nude woman with the caption, "Goddess of Happiness, Divorce Cause—Wedding Makes Two Content."

The divorce referred to in this publication was the one obtained from Tartoue by Mrs. Alma Fodsworth Tartoue in Maine on the ground of desertion and non-support. Tartoue says in his suit that he did not know Miss Windsor, whose father is Alvo Windsor, until after the suit by his first wife had been brought and after the picture that figures in the action had been painted.

The complained-of article said it was understood that the "Goddess of Happiness" was bought by Alfred du Pont for $30,000 and was hanging in the drawing room of his country home on Long Island. Mr. Tartoue said of himself, in his complaint that he was an artist and portrait painter of great reputation, whose works demand large prices and have been widely exhibited and reproduced. He said his picture reproduced in the defendant newspaper was not a portrait at all, but just a "fancy painting," and that the further statement in the alleged libelous article that it played a part in the romance between himself and Miss Windsor meant to imply that his present wife posed for a nude picture before her marriage.

Mrs. Tartoue bases her suit on the same allegations, and that she never posed as an artist's model.

Scene of Accident

WAYNE, N. J., Nov. 17.—Two workmen were killed and several persons injured in a black powder explosion which destroyed two frame buildings of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. plant here this afternoon.

A batch of black powder had just been started through one of the mills and the men, supposed to leave the mill during the process, neglected to do so.

The concussion was felt in Passaic, nineteen miles away. Several cottages erected by the company to house employees were damaged.

The dead are John Foster, forty years old, who lived at Lincoln Park with his wife and seven children, and Herbert J. Williams, twenty years old, who came to Wayne from Brooklyn. Williams's brother-in-law was killed in an explosion here last April.

Three of the injured were taken to the General Hospital in Paterson. They are Mrs. Harry Van Ness, Mrs. James Carey and George Carey.

Austrian Crown Jewels
Too Poor for U. S. Trade

New York Jeweler Tells of Seeing Them on Sale in Paris Market

Members of the Austrian royal family, no longer supported by their subjects, are making strenuous efforts to get rid of their jewels at high prices and thus far have realized about 20,000,000 francs ($3,000,000).

M. H. Levy, a jeweler of this city, who returned from Havre yesterday on the French liner Lafayette, had a look at some of the gems and obtained trustworthy information regarding the bulk of those offered at top prices.

"The crown jewels," he said, "are beautiful, but they are far below the average of gems that are desired in this country. The pieces that have thus far been disposed of for 20,000,000 francs include those of the former Empress Zita."

Maj. Higginson's Funeral
At Harvard University

Members of Boston Symphony Orchestra, Which He Founded, Play at Services

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 17.—Harvard University suspended activities for an hour today while funeral services were held in honor of Major Henry Lee Higginson, banker and founder of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who died Friday night. He was a former Harvard student.

Simple services were held in Appleton Chapel on the university campus, where Major Higginson was married fifty years ago. The Rev. Samuel M. Crothers, a Harvard graduate, conducted the ceremony. The university choir sang and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra played. President A. Lawrence Lowell and the fellows of the university acted as honorary pallbearers. Nephews of Major Higginson were actual pallbearers, but surrendered the casket to undergraduates at the chapel door.

From this point the body was borne through a double rank of undergraduates, who lined the walk to University Hall, where the hearse waited. At Mount Auburn Cemetery Dean James H. Ropes conducted a short burial service. A bigler sounded taps.

Major Higginson was a trustee of the university, the donor of Soldiers' Field and founder of Harvard Union, a meeting place for undergraduates.
